I'm pretty sure this can't be played by a single person, but you can ignore the "Piano 1" line and still get the point. The "Piano 3" line is also physically impossible to play with one hand, and "Piano 2" isn't much better. Three people is probably your best bet... and 2 pianos so you don't run into each other. Tempo is between 220bpm and however-fast-your-metronome-goes. Swing it slightly for best effect! There are probably errors in this... just ignore them.

There are bold measure numbers every 16 bars, when you run across these there is a good chance it is a repeat from an earlier section. If I had done this correctly, there would be section repeats, and it would be far fewer pages.
Lumpsuckers!
Pimpled lumpsucker? Yup. Bumpy lumpsucker? You bet! Toad lumpsucker? Absolutely! All the lumpsuckers!
or cute cats, but I think I got the lumpsucker market cornered!
Naming is very important when it comes to instrumental music. In this case, I wanted to make sure anyone making videos of Lumpsuckers would find this. It may have been better served with a broad title having to do with slapstick comedy or cute cats, but I think I got the lumpsucker market cornered!
Pimpled lumpsucker? Yup. Bumpy lumpsucker? You bet! Toad lumpsucker? Absolutely! All the lumpsuckers!
Lumpsuckers!

Licensed under the Creative Commons: By Attribution 3.0 license.
https://creativecommons.org/licenses/by/3.0/us/